A Tragedy.
A curious love affair between a young Polish student, named Glatstern, and a beautiful New York heiress, Miss Nellie Huse, which a few months ago came near leading to a bloody tragedy, has been brought to a curious and unexpected end in the criminal court of Luzerne, in Switzerland.

In the beginning of last June Mrs. Huse, the widow of a wealthy New York importer, who had resided at No. 129 West Thirty-first street, in this city, went with her three daughters, to Switzerland, and took up her abode, at the Hotel de l'Europe, in the beautiful City of Luzerne. Her oldest daughter, Nellie, was a young lady of 19, a tall, vivacious brunette, with large black eyes, a most prepossessing face, and a Junonian form. On the promenade Nellie Huse was not long in becoming the observed of all observers, and a number of young tourists of all nationalities managed to obtain for her sake an introduction to the family. Among them were the most conspicuous two Philadelphians, Messrs. Bird and Comfort, and a young man, Sigismund Glatstern, scarcely 19 years old, a youth of handsome, dark features, a most impassioned temper, and extraordinary mental endowments, who was soon to exercise a sinister influence upon the destinies of the charming New York belle.

She had not had three interviews with Miss Nellie Huse before he made love to her with all the passionate ardor of his nationality. He told her he was young and poor and friendless, but that she must become his, and that he could not live without her. His fervid professions of burning, ardent love, touched a sympathetic heart. After some hesitations she told him that she reciprocated his affection, and the two held many clandestine meetings. At length, Mrs. Huse, a very serious-minded lady, got wind of this very serious flirtation, and she resolved to put a stop to it. She remonstrated with her infatuated daughter, and told her she would never allow her to throw herself away upon a Polish adventurer without means and prospects; but her remonstrances were of no avail; Nellie managed to elude her watchfulness, and secretly met her Polish lover as frequently as before. Finally, Mrs. Huse, on the advice of Messrs. Bird and Comfort, determined to remove with her family to the watering-place of Gersau, in order to break off the, to her, most distasteful love affair between Glatstern and her eldest daughter. It was all in vain. He followed them to Gersau. There were more clandestine interviews between him and his New York sweetheart; her mother found it out, and sternly forbade Nellie to have anything further to do with him. In a note Nellie communicated this to her infatuated lover.

This drove Glatstern to desperation. Despite the obstacles he had to surmount, he managed to see the girl once more, and obtained from her a promise that she would flee with him during the following night to Italy. The sober, second thought, however, it seems, caused her to change her mind, and, when the hour appointed for the flight to the sunny land of the north came, Miss Nellie failed to meet her anxiously waiting lover. Next day he waited for her long and patiently on the promenade of Gersau; and, when she at last made her appearance, in the company of her youngest sister, Elsie, he approached her hurriedly and asked her in tones of feverish excitement whether or not she intended to keep faith with him. "You know," he said, "I will rather die than live without you." "Then you must die," said Nellie, "and I will die, too; for mother has sworn that we shall never marry." No sooner had she uttered these words than young Glatstern pulled from his pocket a revolver, and crying, "Die then!" fired at her. She fell with a loud scream, and there he stood, another shot at himself. Both were severely, but not fatally wounded. The wounded couple was at once conveyed to Luzerne and placed under the care of the prison surgeon. It took him nearly two months to recover his health.

On the 14th of October he was placed on trial before the Criminal Court of Luzerne. An immense audience was present. When the prisoner was brought in much sympathy was manifested in his behalf. Less favorable were the demonstrations with which the appearance of Mrs. Huse and her deeply-veiled daughter Nellie were greeted.

According to the criminal code of Switzerland, the prisoner was examined in open court. His answers to the questions of the President of the Court made a profound impression upon the audience. They showed that he was almost insensibly enamored of the young New York heiress. Few eyes remained dry when he gave, in his impassioned language, an account of his last interview with Nellie Huse. He did not deny anything that was imputed to him; on the contrary, he admitted, of his own accord, that he intended to kill both the girl and himself. After a most eloquent defense by his counsel, Dr. Gyr, Glatstern was found guilty, but, on account of extenuating circumstances, sentenced merely to ten years' banishment from Switzerland. The announcement of this singularly light sentence was received with loud applause. When Mrs. Huse and her daughter left the court-room they were hissed by the crowd.

SILVER AND GOLD.—It is a curious fact that when the great gold discoveries of twenty years ago were made, economists like Cobden and Chevalier thought that silver would replace gold as the standard money of the world. Holland acted upon the theory, and made silver the standard currency. Now, on the other hand, gold has beaten silver out of the field, so that, with the exception of Holland, no country places silver on an equality even with gold as money. Silver is now quoted at lower rates in the English market, than it has been for twenty years. "Ten years ago," says the writer, "the price was 52½d. per ounce standard; a year ago it was 51½d.; it is now 50½d." The re- year ago it appears to be owing to the changes in the standard money of Germany. Until very recently silver was the sole standard in all the German States. Prince Bismarck proposes to supply its place by a new gold currency. To supply the demotion of silver every foreigner wishes to obtain gold. The latter is hoarded and the former spent. The result is that the price of silver is declining.—N. Y. World.

ORGANIC WEAKNESS.
Immediately cured and Full Vigor Restored.
This distressing Affection—which renders life miserable and marriage impossible—is the penalty paid by the victims of Solitary Vice, or excesses from not being aware of the dreadful consequences that may ensue. Now, who that understands the subject will pretend to deny that the natural powers are lost sooner by those falling into improper habits than by the prudent? Besides being deprived of the pleasures of healthy offspring, the most serious and destructive symptoms of both body and mind arise. The system becomes deranged, the Physical and Mental Functions weakened. Loss of Procreative Power, Nervous Irritability, Dyspepsia, Palpitation of the Heart, Indigestion, Constitutional Debility, and Wasting of the Frame, Cough, Consumption, Decay and Death.
A CURE WARRANTED IN TWO DAYS.
Relief in six hours! No Mercury!
Persons ruined by Ignorant, Trifling Pretenders and their Deadly Poison, should apply immediately.

FALL TRADE, 1872.
E. J. MILLER,
Importer and Wholesale Dealer in China, Glass and Queensware,
Is now receiving his stock of the above goods, to which he invites the attention of country merchants and dealers generally. Having the benefit of fifty years' experience in this business and unusual facilities for purchasing, he is able to offer his goods at as low prices as any house in the country, and all he asks is an examination of his goods and prices. Country merchants coming on the trains of the O. & A. M. R., and the W. & O. R. can look through his stock and leave their orders at night, as his house is kept open for that purpose.
Besides a regular stock of CHINA, GLASS and QUEENWARE, a number of other goods suitable for country stores, will be found such as BRASS, SILVER, and SILVER-PLATED CASTLES, SPOONS, FORKS, &c., Window Glass and Putty, Stoneware, Fine Tea and Dinner Sets, and a variety of Fancy Goods—all at lowest prices for cash.
THOS. B. HUDSON is still with the above house, and will be glad to have a call from his old friends.
